The following are the names of the players: "The Children of the Soil," which Stenklewicz thought would be the crowning glory of his literary career, was speedily relegated to comparative oblivion when once the public had read the great masterpiece, "Quo Vadis."

"The Children of the Soil," is a Polish story of one people only while "Quo Vadis" is the story of the "Way of the Cross," and has, and belongs to all humanity.

This book has been translated into many languages, and in dramatized form, stands foremost among the great scenic productions of the day.

An elaborate presentation of "Quo Vadis" will be given at the Opera House next Thursday, Dec. 12, when the public will welcome the opportunity of seeing the drama which has attracted such favorable criticism.

A LOSS TO GREENWOOD.

Sudden Death of D. A. P. Jordan, One of the Most Prominent Business Men of the Up-Country.

Greenwood, December 8.—D. A. P. Jordan, of this city, was found dead in his bed to-day at 12 o'clock. He did not come to breakfast, but no suspicion that anything was the matter occurred to anyone until about 11 o'clock when, as he had not left his room, an attempt was made to enter his room.

The outside doors were locked, but an entrance was effected by pushing the key out.

The door to his bed room was found also locked and entrance was made through his bath room, and Mr. Jordan was found dead, lying on his side in bed.

Major and Mrs. H. G. Hartzog and E. C. Rice, who have rooms in the same apartments, were the ones who found him.

Mr. Jordan was lying partly on his back, with his right hand extended across the bed and with his left hand pressing over his heart.

Physicians were immediately summoned, but their skill was of no avail.

In their opinion Mr. Jordan had been dead several hours. The bed clothes were not rumpled and from all appearances Mr. Jordan had not been in bed long when death came.

The physicians state that cerebral hemorrhage was the cause of his death and the coroner's jury returned a verdict to that effect.

Dr. Neel stated that this hemorrhage was superinduced by Bright's disease.

D. A. P. Jordan, or Parker Jordan, as he was familiarly known, was one of the most prominent business men in the upper South Carolina.

At the time of his death he was president of the Grendel Mills, of Greenwood, vice-president of the City Bank and a director in nearly every business enterprise in the city.

He was also one of the directors of the C. and W. C. R. R.

Mr. Jordan was about 50 years old and unmarried. He has two brothers, John, of Greenville, and Lambert, of Seneca, and three sisters, Mrs. Brooks, of Verdery; Mrs. M. C. Casian, of Clinton, and Mrs. M. M. Lipscomb, of Verdery.

Mr. Jordan leaves a substantial estate, consisting of valuable stocks and other securities.

The burial will take place in the City Cemetery here at 12 o'clock Tuesday.
